THE POET'S SONG.

A bird of richest song flew out
And piped his carol full of cheer,
And long he winged his way about,
But few would wait his song to hear.

With sorrow, in his lonely nest,
He hid his sweet song in his breast.
But some had heard that song of joy;
It came and soothed the pangs of pain,
Gave hope where doubt rose to destroy;
Despairing souls tried once again,
It lifted hearts all temptations tossed—
That song, though stilled, was never lost.

A poet, no one knew him then,
Sang out his carol full of cheer,
Of hope and faith and love for men,
But few would wait his song to hear.
The poet? He is dead! But yet
The songs he sang no hearts forget.
—George Birdseye in Boston Globe.

AT FOUR O'CLOCK.

For more than a month there had been growing among the men of Townsend's set a suspicion that he was going to the bad. Once he had been seen coming out of a house which seemed to the eyes of Chadwick, who met him, to conceal possibilities of faro. To be sure, it was found afterward that Townsend had been to visit his "goody's" husband, who was laid up with a broken leg; but the impression clung, nevertheless.

Then Morton saw him one day on the street in conversation with a young woman of somewhat flamboyant architecture, and although it was proved beyond a peradventure that she was the very respectable person who did his mending, yet there were many who believed that Townsend was "unashed."

Unexplained, however, was his disappearance from his usual haunts at 4 o'clock every afternoon. There were rumors of his having been seen in dingy streets in the port by men who were walking out from Boston and were taking a short cut through that region.

Such being the state of public opinion, no one was surprised to have Townsend throw down his hand one day as the clock struck 4, although the last jack pot had been unusually exciting. "I'm not coming in," he said. "In fact, I'm going out"—an attempt at wit that was greeted with derision.

With the shutting of the door every hand was tossed upon the table as if by common consent.

"He's going this every day to my personal knowledge," said Chadwick. "and I'm going to see it out this afternoon."

"I'll go with you!" cried Morton. The rest had no theories, but went from curiosity—all except Allen, who was a senior and who knew Townsend's mother and was in love with his sister, and hence felt it incumbent upon him to take the interest of an elder brother in his welfare.

For 20 minutes he led them at a smart pace through the better part of Cambridgeport, and then turned aside into a short bystreet that extended toward the river.

There was no electric light in this obscure alley and the early dusk of the winter afternoon concealed the group of spies in its fast deepening shadows. Townsend passed the tenements and went up the steps of a cottage, the only detached house on the street. It was at the end—beyond it a tin can strewn vacant lot, extending to the marsh.

Allen looked grave as he saw Townsend knock as if to warn the inmates of his coming and then take a latchkey from his pocket and enter before the door could be opened from within.

With one accord the eavesdroppers moved toward the vacant lot, where a shaft of light streamed from a side window. Once around the corner they did not see a woman who left the house almost as soon as Townsend had entered.

What they did see as they pressed to the window, whose partly raised curtain allowed them a good view of the room and its occupants, was of a nature to surprise every one of them.

Before the fire sat an old woman whom the novels of 50 years ago would have described as a "beldam." Wild eyes indicative of a disordered mind blazed in a face crowned by a mass of unkempt white hair. Her thin figure ever swayed to the promptings of an inner restlessness, and her nervous hands clutched incessantly at her dress or at the air.

The onlookers were in time to see Townsend greet her. She responded to his salutation by a blow of her cane, which the young man dodged with a coolness born of experience.

Seemingly unruffled by this reception, Townsend went to a closet in the room, and taking from it a chafing dish and eggs and milk and butter he set about the preparation of an omelette.

"Well, I'll be—hanged!" said Chadwick, slow in his amazement. "By Jove!" exclaimed Morton. "That's the silver dish his mother sent him on his birthday. I thought he'd put it in hock."

Allen said nothing, but he felt a twinge of remorse, for he had thought so too.

It required some skill to serve the meal once it was cooked. Townsend placed a small table before the old lady. She promptly kicked it over.

When at last she was induced to hold the plate, she first threw a bit of the omelette to the cat ("A libation to Felis," whispered Grimston, who had taken honors in classics and antiquities), and then flung her fork into the fire. Townsend rescued it and substituted a spoon, which seemed more to his patient's fancy.

To air the overheated room Townsend opened the window directly over their heads as they squatted on the ground. He lifted the curtain higher and looked out blindly into the darkness. Allen thought that he heard him sigh. So did Morton. Morton was a just little man when once he was convinced.

"I say, fellows," he whispered excitedly when Townsend had been recalled to his duties by a boiling over of the teakettle that threatened to put out the fire in the grate—"I say, fellows, I don't believe he likes doing it after all."

Townsend had doctored the kettle from the fire and was making tea in a brown teapot with a broken spout. While it was steeping he picked up the pieces of the shattered plate from the hearth where the old woman had tossed it when she had finished her omelette.

"Here's your tea," came distinctly through the open window a few minutes later. "What will you stir it with today?"

He turned to a motley collection of articles on a shelf at the old woman's side. She selected a toothbrush, at which Townsend was seen by his watchful friends to make a grimace.

"I'm ready; go on," they heard her say, and Townsend, seated on the table's edge, in proximity to his cooking apparatus, swung his legs idly and began to sing "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley."

"Well, I'll be—hanged!" said Chadwick. The tea and the music seemed to have a composing influence upon the old woman. The incessant swaying of her body ceased. Only the nervous hands beat continual time with the toothbrush against the teacup.

"I went through a pork establishment the other day," said Townsend, resting his elbow on his knee and his chin on his hand, "and there I learned the intimate connection between the rendering of pig products and the rendering of a song. I stored the information in my memory to tell you."

The old woman showed some interest. "In rendering pork, you know, you try the fat, and in rendering a song you try the audience. See? I will now illustrate the rendering of a song," he went on hastily, seeing that his patient was growing restless in her effort to understand his nonsense.

He was singing "Ben Bolt" in a highly sentimental manner and tears were running down his hearer's withered cheeks when a step in the entry caused an instant change in her demeanor. Springing to her feet, she flung her teacup straight at the door. Townsend sprang from the table and caught it nimbly on the fly.

"Out!" cried Grimston under his breath. "How has she been?" the newcomer asked, with no trace of surprise at the warmth of her reception. She was a woman of 40, tall and angular, and her features showed her kinship to the insane woman, her mother.

"About as usual," returned Townsend. "I saved the cup today, you see, but I was too late for the plate," indicating the fragments on the table.

The listeners beneath the window now thought it wise to make good their escape—all except Allen. He walked along slowly after his friends, who were running in pursuit of an electric car that had flashed by the end of the alley. He let Townsend come up with him.

"Hello, old man! What are you doing here?"

"Spying on you," returned Allen frankly, and then made his confession, ending with, "And I beg your pardon with all my heart."

"Oh, that's all right," said Townsend, much embarrassed. "They're just two old women I found out about. The daughter makes neckties, and she has to deliver them at a shop in the square every day at 3 o'clock, so if I can stay with the mother while she's out she can keep her job, you see. Then it saves her some trouble if the old woman has her supper while she's gone. It amuses me, too," he added rather shamefacedly.

Allen never told Townsend who had been his companions in the reconnoitering expedition, but it was not hard to guess at some of them. Chadwick came to Townsend the next day with—

"I say! I've got some money here that I got the other night—no matter how—and I don't like to keep it. Do you know any poor people that it would help?"

And Morton, who had cut several recitations for the purpose of going into Boston to make some purchases, brought him a big bundle of silks, saying—

"Old man, Allen tells me that you know a woman who makes neckties. Will you get her to make me up some out of these? Pretty, aren't they?" he added sheepishly.

And Grimston, who was fond of antiquities, implored him whenever they met to "render a song to try men's souls."—Mabel Shippen Clarke in National Magazine.

How Byron Proposed.

Byron's proposal to his wife, Miss Milbanke, was made after a sordid discussion and study and lacked all impulse. Lady Melbourne, who stood in his confidence, observing how cheerless and unsettled his mind and prospects were, strenuously advised him to marry. She suggested a certain lady, but Lord Byron fancied the idea of marrying Miss Milbanke.

"No," said Lady Melbourne, "Miss Milbanke will not suit you. In the first place, she has no fortune now, and you want money immediately. In the next place, you want a person who will have great admiration for your genius; she has too great an admiration for herself."

"Well," said Byron, "as you please." And, sitting down, he wrote a letter to the lady recommended by Lady Melbourne. He received a refusal.

"Now, you see," said he, "Miss Milbanke is to be the person after all. I will write to her."

As soon as he had finished his friend, still remonstrating, read the note and observed—

"Well, really, this is a very pretty letter. It is a pity it should not go. Then it shall go," exclaimed Byron, and, so saying, he sealed and sent the flat of his unhappy fate.

Speaking Of—

Sons of whisks imagine that the only thing necessary to become an Irish comedian is to put whiskers under their chins.—Athenian Globe.

A WOMAN'S HAND.

The dawn grew golden in the east, The dancing and the music ceased, The world, the world of men, awoke And then the guest who tarried spoke.

And as he spoke he took her hand In his he could not understand, And held it, tiny, white and slim, While she in silence gazed at him.

"Soft little tender, birdlike thing, May time or toil," he murmured, "bring No line to thee, poor girlish hand! Oh, he could never understand!"

Then she, with one strange, wistful look, Drew back the hand he idly took And, smiling, hid it from his gaze While he bowed low and went his ways.

The little hand remained the same Soft, birdlike thing, and no toil came To take its tenderness away, Nor steal its beauty day by day.

For in the world its only task Was but to press a wayward heart (Ah, little hand, so white and slim!) That ached with all her love for him.

TO CURE A FELON.

How to Treat These Dangerous and Painful Sores.

A felon is a severe and usually a most painful inflammation of the end of the finger, more commonly either the thumb or index finger of the right hand, for the reason that these are most exposed to the little wounds from which the trouble starts; but any of the fingers, or even one of the toes, may be the seat of a felon.

The inflammation starts generally from the prick of a pin or needle or from a scratch or cut, but often the wound is so slight that no notice is taken of it until the finger begins to grow sore. The soreness soon passes into actual pain, and this rapidly becomes most intense and throbbing, and sometimes is felt all the way up the arm.

It is worse when the hand is allowed to hang down. The ball of the finger is hot, red and swollen. At the same time the patient feels more or less ill, is feverish, and has a headache and rapid pulse.

When the inflammation is deep seated, pus collects beneath the periosteum, or membrane covering the bone, and this greatly increases the distress as well as the danger. If allowed to go on unrelieved, the inflammation may creep up the finger into the palm of the hand, and then the condition becomes a most serious one. In almost any case when once pus has formed beneath the periosteum more or less of the bone will die, leaving the end of the finger crippled or disfigured by a deep scar.

When the treatment is begun very early, it is sometimes possible to cut short the inflammation by cold cloths applied continuously to the inflamed part. These must be frequently renewed, for if allowed to get warm they will act as poultices and rather hasten suppuration than arrest it. At the same time the arm should be kept in a sling, with the hand raised and resting on the chest.

If the inflammation does not rapidly subside under this treatment, we must reverse it and try to bring matters to a head by means of poultices or wet cloths applied as hot as they can be borne and changed very often.

The only thing to be done when pus has formed is to cut the finger and let it out. This is painful enough for the instant, but it will prevent many days of acute suffering and all danger of severe inflammation of the hand and arm, with subsequent blood poisoning—Youth's Companion.

Most Curious Clock.

One of the most curious clocks in the world is that which Amos Lane of Amidee, Nev., constructed some time ago. The machinery, which is nothing but a face, hands and lever, is connected with a geyser, which shoots out an immense column of hot water every 38 seconds. This spurting never varies to the tenth of a second, and therefore a clock properly attached to it cannot fail to keep correct time. Every time the water spouts up it strikes the lever and moves the hands forward 38 seconds.

Poor, helpless, hopeless, sick, suffering, miserable woman. Sick because she doesn't know any better. Sick because she doesn't really know why. Sick because the organs that make her a woman are not properly performing their functions and so are sending nerve messages with aches and pains and distress all over her quivering body.

Nine-tenths of women's sickness comes from disorder of these special organs. The symptoms are various—the cause the same. Headache, backache, nervousness, wakefulness, neuralgia and fifty other troubles of women may nearly always be traced directly to feminine weakness or disease.

When the most important organism of a woman's body is disordered her whole physical and mental system is upset. The only way to find comfort is to cure the real cause of the misery. Local doctors in general practice are frequently so hurried and rushed that they treat the symptom and not the disease. They give a woman medicine for headache when the headache is due to the reflex action of the uterine nerves. They may give her good medicine but for the wrong disease. Thousands of women, after years of discouragement, have written to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and now thank him for their renewed health and happiness. For over thirty years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute. It was over thirty years ago that he began to use his "Favorite Prescription" in his practice.

It is a medicine devised to cure one certain kind of disease—female diseases. It brings ease and comfort and sleep. It restores perfect health. It fills out cheeks hollowed by nervousness. It puts vim and snap into the whole body. It is sold by most dealers in medicine. Don't take anything else. Nothing else is "the same." Nothing else is "as good." Get what you ask for. Patronize honest dealers.

SONOMA, JUNE 24, 1899.

H. H. GRANICE, EDITOR

It must be gall and wormwood to the disappointed office-seeker of Glen Ellen and his Sonoma allies, who would like to but can't run this paper, to look over the columns of the INDEX-TRIBUNE and observe its sixteen or seventeen columns of paying advertisements. A little more opposition on their part and we will be compelled to enlarge to an eight-page sheet in order to accommodate our patrons. The subscription list of the INDEX-TRIBUNE is also constantly increasing and hardly a week passes but what three or four new names are added to our mailing list and that, too, without a solicitor in the field. The INDEX-TRIBUNE's friends on the outside are our only solicitors and we thank them for their good offices, and assure them that in the future as in the past that no clique, faction or clan can run this newspaper.

SECRETARY LELONG of the State Board of Horticulture announces that he has been successful in his experiments in grafting large limbs of trees upon a foster mother root. For instance, he has taken a limb from a naval orange tree, united it with foster mother roots, and planted it in sandy soil. In eight months the limb so treated, and which has thus become a tree, has attained a growth equal to that of two or three years in the case of an ordinary bud upon seedling stock. He has obtained like results with the pear, peach, apple, olive and other trees. The question as to the bearing qualities of trees established in this manner has not yet been determined. This is a matter of years, but the Secretary is hopeful of good results in all respects. Should it prove practicable to set out orchards in this way, much time will be saved in producing trees of a bearing age.

An effort was made by a member to change the age limit to sixty-five years, but the leader of the opposition remarked that no kids were wanted in the organization and the motion was voted down.

He also advises the careful inspection of the mistletoe on the oak and also the acacia and locust trees.

THERE will be no celebration in Sonoma this year and the people of Sonoma Valley are making preparations to observe the day in other places. Some will go to Glen Ellen, others to Napa and Petaluma while still others will take in the grand military parade in San Francisco.

Daily Chronicle and Index-Tribune $8.25 per year.

LUTHER W. BURRIS, Cashier of the Santa Rosa Bank and Treasurer of the Rose City cannery, and J. M. Striening, Secretary of the new cannery combine, assert that the combination formed by the canneries will not work against the farmers this year at any rate, says the Chronicle. At present apricots are being contracted for at $50, peaches at $20 for clings and $15 for freestones, and pears at $40 where there is shipping competition. Under the present plan peaches will be advanced to $30 and $20, and one man will do all the buying, each grower directing to which cannery his fruit shall go. The canneries hope to improve greatly the grade of the goods sent out of the State and build up a demand for a good quality of fruit at good prices. Striening does not think that the farmer will be injured but the canneries will be benefited by the move.

We are in receipt of an advanced copy of "The Modern Farmer," which has just been issued from the press by the publishers, the N. J. Stone Company, 809 Market Street, San Francisco. The author Edward F. Adams, is a practical farmer and for some years was the agricultural editor of the San Francisco Chronicle. It is a most timely publication and ought to be in the hands of every farmer in the land as it discusses in a plain common sense way many propositions of interest to the husbandman.

This office acknowledges with thanks an invitation to accept the hospitalities of the Fourth of July Committee of Petaluma on the occasion of their coming celebration, which will be one of the most attractive ever held in that city.

Death of David Cheney.

How Old She Looks

Poor clothes cannot make you look old. Even pale cheeks won't do it. Your household cares may be heavy and disappointments may be deep, but they cannot make you look old. One thing does it and never fails.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

It thickens the hair also; stops it from falling out; and cleanses the scalp from dandruff. Shall we send you our book on the Hair and its Diseases?

SONOMA COUNTY HAPPENINGS.

The annual wool sale at Cloverdale Thursday attracted a large number of buyers to the orange city. There were 800 bales of wool in the warehouse before the sale commenced. Five hundred bales were sold Thursday. The price fetched ranged from 15 to 16 1/2 cents per pound. Three or four choice lots fetched as high as 17 cents. The lucky holders of this wool include A. S. Marshall, Mrs. Rector and W. T. Rock.

The initial steps in a war against slot machines was made by the City Trustees of Petaluma at their meeting last Monday night when Trustee C. A. The new ordinance was referred to the City Attorney and will come up for final passage at the meeting to be held on July 3rd.—Courier.

Is The Steam Locomotive Doomed?

Men who ought to know say that in the next ten years every steam locomotive will disappear completely, and electric motors will supplant them. They also say that with the new motive power trains will rush along at a minimum speed of 100 miles an hour. This will prove a great blessing to those who wish to go quickly from one point to another, but no more so than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters (as proven) a blessing to those who wish to go quickly from sickness to health. This is not an idle assertion, but a plain truth. The Bitters act at once upon stubborn cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, liver complaint, kidney disease, malaria and fevers. They improve appetite, purify the blood, quiet the nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep. The trial of a single bottle will afford convincing proof. Sold at drug stores all over America.

THE ALUMNI OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The reception given by the Alumni of the High School to the Class of '99, last Saturday evening, was a pleasant affair. Lachryma Montis was thrown open to the Alumni and their friends by Mrs. Emparan, one of the late General Vallejo's most charming daughters. A more kindly welcome could not have been accorded than that given by this hospitable lady, nor could a more beautiful spot in the whole valley have been selected for a garden party. Here are luxuriant palms, handsome lemon, orange and magnolia trees, pretty flowers, shady arbors, splashing fountains and a large natural lake. The grounds and lake were brilliantly lighted by Japanese lanterns for the occasion and the veranda in front of the house was draped in the High School colors—gold and white. The Alumni had arranged a program for the entertainment of their guests and this was carried out during the first part of the evening. Benj. Weed made some appropriate remarks, Miss Claire Hope sang in a most delightful manner, Miss Doris Clewe spoke in behalf of the class of '99 and acknowledged the courtesy of the Alumni. Rev. Mr. Milliken rendered a vocal solo and was heartily received. Then came a song by Will Bradford of San Francisco. The Alumni song, written by Miss C. C. Granice of the Class of '97, was also sung and the air fairly rang with the right jolly chorus and cheers for the Class of '99. After the program dancing and refreshments followed. The affair broke up at midnight.

Robt. Hall's Residence Invaded by Thieves.

Sunday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock the rear portion of Mr. Robt. Hall's residence at the foot of Broadway was entered by burglars. An entrance was effected through a small pantry window, and a raid was made on the family supplies. Everything edible was appropriated and carried away, even to a Sunday dinner, which included a quarter of lamb. The servant girl saw a light moving in the dining room from her chamber window at 3:45 A. M., but supposed some of the family were sick. The burglars made a thorough search through lockers, closets and cupboards for grub and groceries, but silverware on the sideboard in the dining room was not taken, showing they only wanted supplies for a camping outfit, instead of valuables. The main and front portions of the house were not prospected.

RACKET BARGAINS!

The word "Bargain" has been brought into disfavor by its association with cheap, shoddy goods by dishonest merchants who seek to defraud their customers. When the RACKET STORE of Petaluma speaks of bargains it means exceptionally good values. It means honest goods at prices much below the regular.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

H. H. GRANICE, Proprietor.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1899.

Notice of Business Change.

The old saying that "the unlooked-for always happens" may be true in the present instance. The Sonoma News is no more! Having sold the paper and its good will to Mr. Granice, the business and subscription books pass into his hands. Those who are in arrears for their paper will please pay Mr. Granice and those who have paid in advance will receive the INDEX-TRIBUNE to full extent of their subscriptions.

There are three reasons I might give for making this change. It is well known that I did not buy the News with the intention of running it myself. A person usually sells a commercial commodity when the price asked is accepted. The third reason is the more potent one—our patronizing territory is too limited to properly support two weekly newspapers.

But we do need and must have for the wealth of the commonwealth one good, wide-awake paper, which shall be alive to the best interests of our people, and such a paper Mr. Granice will be able to furnish us providing he has the good will and support his paper merits. So we sincerely hope all our subscribers and patrons will lend a hand.

With a thank you to our friends and wishes for the success of the INDEX-TRIBUNE we break our quill. E. E. THOMPSON.

SECONDHAND SHOES.

Extensive Repairs May Be Made For Very Little Money.

A sign hanging in front of a shoe maker's shop where secondhand shoes were sold had upon it these words: "Secondhand Shoes With New Uppers." It seemed almost as though a pair of secondhand shoes, with new uppers would be practically new shoes, but inquiry showed that this impression was not warranted by the facts. There is a good deal of fresh material in a pair of shoes thus repaired, but there is also left a good deal of the old.

The new upper thus put in is a new vamp, the front part of the upper. The old counter, or back part of the shoe, still remains. It is a familiar fact that while the counter may break down or wear out or get a hole in it somehow it is much more likely to stay sound and good. It is the front that cracks and breaks. And so in putting secondhand shoes in order new vamps are sometimes put in. But while such a shoe, which had also been soled and heeled, might easily be described as having undergone extensive repairs it would still be far from wholly new. There would remain, besides the old counter, the shank and the inner sole and the general shape and framework of the shoe, and upon these the repairs could be made.

Secondhand shoes bring various prices, depending on their original quality and their condition. A pair of secondhand shoes, resoled and retacked and with new uppers, can be bought for as little as a dollar.—New York Sun

The Madrid Museum.

After the social side of life in the Spanish capital has lost some of its novelty there are always the collections to see and admire. And, after all, the crowning glory of the place is the Museo del Prado, which, if not the finest in Europe, at least ranks with the Louvre and the galleries of Dresden and Florence, says a correspondent in the Chicago Record. The gallery is especially rich in portraits of the great kings of Spain, and its chief treasures are the works of Diego Velasquez, some 60 in number. The light of the gallery itself is perhaps poor, but the charm of being able to walk undisturbed and never crowded amid this marvelous collection of works by the masters is enough of itself to repay a visit to Spain. The royal collection of armor at the place is as interesting as the Prado pictures, in a way, and after these collections come others less notable, but worthy of a great capital.

Two Peking Towers.

Peking has a tower in which is hung a large bell cast in the fifteenth century and another tower containing a huge drum which is intended to be beaten in case a great danger should threaten the city. No one is allowed to enter these towers.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

He Was an Utter Failure as an After Dinner Speaker.

Washington Irving was not a ready after dinner speaker. The author of "American Bookmen" says that he shunned public appearances. Yet when Dickens came to New York, in 1842, Irving could not escape presiding at the great dinner in his honor. They had already become friends through correspondence, for Irving's delight in Little Nell had been expressed in a letter to the author, and Dickens, in his enthusiastic response, had said:

"Diedrich Knickerbocker! I have worn to death in my pocket, and yet I should show you his mutilated carcass with a joy beyond expression."

The night of the public dinner came, and Irving's dread of the introductory speech kept him murmuring throughout the repeat, "I shall certainly break down."

At the proper time he rose to his feet, began bravely, but could only utter a few sentences, and ended by taking refuge in the announcement of "the toast."

"Charles Dickens, the guest of the nation."

"There!" he said. "I told you I should break down, and I have done it!" Later, while on his way to Madrid, he found himself called upon at the dinner of the Literary fund in London to respond to the toast, "Washington Irving and American literature." All he could say in acknowledgment of an enthusiastic reception was:

"I beg to return you my very sincere thanks."

One Englishman at the table was heard to make the laconic comment, "Brief!"

"Yes," said another beside him, "but you can tell the gentleman in the very tone of his voice."

TALKING DOWN THE TUBE.

Unpleasant Results From Keeping a Harsh Voiced Maid.

One of the unpleasant features of life in a flat is that you unconsciously turn friends or indifferent acquaintances into bitter enemies. Some mornings the bell. Your faithful maid rushes from the kitchen to the speaking tube.

"Who is it?"

But no words can describe the forbidding tone in which this natural request is made. You say to yourself, "I must sandpaper Emma's voice."

If you were at the other end of the tube, you would hear a well bred question.

"Is Mrs. Smithers in?"

"Who is it?" (Emma is unconcerned.)

"Is Mrs. Smithers in?"

"What's your name?" (Fortissimo.)

"I asked if Mrs. Smithers was in."

"Yes, but who are you?" (You rush into the hall to expostulate.)

"Will you tell Mrs. Smithers that Mrs. De Lancy Montessor called?"

"Come up."

Silence.

Ominous silence. You look out of the window. Mrs. Montessor is going away. The back of her head looks angry.

And it was only last Thursday that you invited her to talk with you at your home about getting up a class to study Dante in the original.

Emma is in the kitchen. You dare not reproach her. In the first place, you yourself told her always to ask a caller's name before opening the door. In the second place, she is getting dinner.

Cranky Vessels.

Even the best designers never know how their ships will turn out when completed. They may break all records for speed or they may be so slow as to be entirely useless—a mere waste of money.

Years ago two mad barges were built at San Francisco, exactly alike, constructed from one design. One of them was quite commonplace, but the other raced every barge in the bay and beat them all; raced every yacht on the Pacific coast and beat them all. She was so fast that her racers were built on her lines, but turned out mere barges for sloth. Nobody could see how this craft did it and for her crawling sisters or for the yachts.

In 1851 the America went to Cowes, England, and raced for a prize cup. She won that trophy, and then an Englishman bought her and improved her hull, stiffening it with knees throughout. After that she lost every race.

Oberlyng the Robin's Warning.

In some parts of Warwickshire the tapping of a bird around the house is looked upon by the superstitious as a warning. A doctor was recently summoned in hot haste to a farmhouse not many miles from Birmingham. He found an old man in bed, but in perfect health, and asked why he had been sent for.

"Why, sir," replied the daughter-in-law, "there come a little robin about the door; we knowed it was a 'call,' and we thought it must be grand for, so we put on in bed and sent for you."

No Half Way Invalid.

"My friend," said the nervous man, "don't you think you ought to take something for that cold? You know what a great deal of trouble may arise from a slight cough."

"That's all right," answered Dr. Ringer Dan. "I never had a slight cough in my life. When I cough, I cough like blazes."

Horseback Riding.

Horseback riding possesses, according to some physicians, the faculty of both increasing and reducing weight. If meals are taken immediately after riding, additional flesh is gained, otherwise a decrease of flesh results.
